HERE'S WHAT YOU MISSED IN THIS WEEK'S PULASKI COUNTY JOURNAL

Suspicious male contacts students at bus stop

The Eastern Pulaski Community School Corporation and the Pulaski County Sheriff's Office are informing parents to be aware of a suspicious encounter students have recently had.

On March 3, students were allegedly approached by a man in the Beardstown area. According to police, the male was believed to be between 30-45 years of age, with stubble on his face and dark curly hair. He is reported to have been driving a four-door tan Chrysler passenger car with tinted windows.

The school corporation said the driver "waved to the students and asked them to get in his car." The driver left the area when a relative's car approached.

Both the school corporation and Pulaski County Sheriff Jeffery Richwine remind parents to talk with their children about strangers and who to speak with or what to do when they feel threatened.

Richwine also suggested that parents or guardians keep a close eye on their children while they are at the bus stops.

"With the Delphi situation as well as a similar situation as this morning occurring in the Fulton area a few weeks ago, we cannot be too careful," said Eastern Pulaski Community School Corporation Superintendent Dan Foster on March 3.

Parents are also reminded to try and get a photo of the suspect or suspect vehicle.

No additional information is available about the driver.

Tips for child safety:

- Teach kids that adults don't need help from kids.
- Have a code word phrase.
- Let your child know it's OK to cause a scene with yelling, screaming and saying no when an adult makes them feel uncomfortable or scared.
- Be cautious and aware of allowing your child to wear identifying clothing such as a shirt with their name on it.

West Central community gives students high fives

Pulaski County residents and West Central community members spent time with students Friday morning as part of the High Five Friday program.

For the next two Fridays the community has been invited to give West Central middle and high school students a high five or words of encouragement before their school day begins.

On March 3, the students were headed to finish their ISTEP testing, so not all of them were smiles while others enjoyed the fun.
