Memorial Day

Americans across this nation will pause to observe Memorial Day. Since its first official observance on May 5, 1868, when it was called Declaration Day, it has been a day of remembrance for those who sacrificed and died in our nation's service.

We in this country owe a great debt of gratitude to those who sacrificed their lives so that we could live free. We can start to repay that debt by remembering this:

It is the soldier — not the reporter, who has given us freedom of the press.

It is the soldier — not the poet, who has given us the freedom of speech.

It is the soldier — not the campus organizer, who has given us the freedom to demonstrate.

It is the soldier — not the lawyer, who has given us the right to a fair trial.

And it is the soldier — who salutes the flag, who serves the flag, who fights for the flag, whose coffin is draped with the flag, who allows the protester the right to burn that same flag he sacrificed his life for.

To those who died securing peace and freedom; to those who served in conflict to protect our land and sacrificed their dreams to preserve the hope of our nation — keeping America the land of the free for more than two centuries — we owe our thanks and honor. It is important to not only recognize their service but to respect their devotion to duty to ensure that the purpose for which they fought will never be forgotten.

Our flag is truly a symbol of the freedoms that we fight so diligently to protect. From Francis Scott Key's vision of bombs bursting in air to the courageous memory of marines raising the flag at Iwo Jima — the American flag is a symbol of freedom that we celebrate and hold sacred. Let it also remind each of us of the sacrifice made by men and women throughout our nation so that this flag could ever stand tall. And, let us not forget that we will ever see it wave as a nation of free people because of the lives that we honor each Memorial Day.

Harry Truman once said, "I think I know the American soldier...he does not want gratitude or sympathy. He had a job to do. He did not like it. But he did it. And, oh how he did it."

So let us pause with respect and honor on this Memorial Day to remember those who fought, for those who gave their life; we owe each of them the highest regard, respect and honor — and the assurance that their commitment to this nation's freedom will never be forgotten.

May God bless each and every one of you and may God bless America. Thank you.
