HERE'S WHAT YOU MISSED in this week's PULASKI COUNTY JOURNAL

Community foundation puts down roots

The Community Foundation of Pulaski County (CFPC) is putting down roots with the purchase of property to establish its own office in downtown Winamac. The CFPC Board of Directors approved purchase of the existing house at 221 N. Monticello Street, and will have officially acquired the property by the time this article is in print. The board believes the 100-year-old home exudes the long-term character and qualities that represent the community foundation itself.

The Community Foundation of Pulaski County plans to operate out of their new office on Monticello Street in 2022.

CFPC President Vicki Overmyer said, "Located just a block away from our current office, the sturdy house on the corner of Monticello and Spring Streets is near the heart of the downtown and within easy access to key sites and businesses. The best part is that it will be the foundation's own space for years to come!"

Gregg Malott, CFPC Treasurer, agrees with the benefit of ownership versus renting for the foundation, and that the decision aligns with the organization's emphasis on permanency and investing in the community. The property is being purchased with an operating reserve consisting of a combination of dollars received from Lilly Endowment in the foundation's early years and interest. He emphasized the reserve was set aside years ago and does not include donor contributions. Malott said, "Just as CFPC encourages long-term planning and investing in our community, the purchase and ownership of the property illustrates the foundation's plan and investment in the future."

A thorough renovation will take place over the coming months with the intent to begin operations from the new office in 2022. The foundation's first office was established in 2001 on Main Street in Winamac, and moved to its current location on Pearl Street in 2006.
