HERE'S WHAT YOU MISSED IN THIS WEEK'S PULASKI COUNTY JOURNALNIPSCO reminds customers of carbon monoxide dangers

As temperatures begin to dip, NIPSCO reminds customers of the importance of maintaining a safe home heating system.

An annual inspection is essential for every home's furnace to ensure that it is working efficiently and to help protect dwellers from safety concerns, such as carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning.

Carbon monoxide (CO) is an odorless, colorless, tasteless, non-corrosive gas and a by-product of the combustion of fuels such as coal, wood, charcoal, natural gas and fuel oil. It can be emitted by furnaces, space heaters, stoves fireplaces, water heaters and automobile exhaust. Carbon monoxide can be poisonous if allowed to accumulate in enclosed spaces.

The most common symptoms of CO poisoning are flu-like, including headache, dizziness, weakness, nausea, vomiting, chest pain and confusion. At high levels, it can cause loss of consciousness and death. If someone thinks they are suffering from CO poisoning, he or she should get fresh air immediately and call 911.

Take action to prevent carbon monoxide poisoning:

- Install a battery-operated CO detector in the home, making sure it's clear of furniture or draperies. Test the battery regularly.
- Do not use ovens, gas ranges or grills to heat the home.
- Never use a generator inside the home, basement, garage or other enclosed or partially enclosed area.
- Never leave a car or lawn mower engine running in a shed, garage or in any enclosed space.

For more important safety tips, visit www.NIPSCO.com/StaySafe.

Extension awarded grant for free library program

Submitted by Natalie Daily-Federer, PhD, Pulaski County Extension Director and Educator

The Purdue Extension Office of Pulaski County was awarded a community service grant provided by Serve Indiana to establish the Little Free Library Program in numerous towns in Pulaski County.

"I am so excited about this grant because it gives us the opportunity to establish small libraries in our rural communities that may lack libraries or residents who have limited access to books," said Dr. Natalie Daily-Federer, Extension Office Director and 4-H Youth Development Educator. "Research shows that education and poverty go hand-in-hand and that many people are just trying to feed their families, let alone purchase books for their children or for their own use."

The little libraries look like oversized birdhouses and are all enclosed. Each one will house a number of books for children and adults. Books can be returned or kept.

"Our goal is to help youth and families gain accessibility to books," Daily-Federer said. "If they want to keep it, no problem. That may be one of the only books in their home. We can get more and will look to restock the libraries quarterly."

Little Free Libraries will be placed in the spring, pending community or town approval, and the locations will be in Star City, Medaryville and Pulaski. Donations of gently used children's books and adult books or magazines (which focus on parenting, cooking and healthy living) can be dropped off at the extension office. Financial donations can be made as well to purchase and upkeep the little libraries.

"Anyone is welcome to use the little libraries and we hope that it will raise literacy awareness and accessibility to books in our community," Daily-Federer said.

Check out the extension Facebook page for updates and reminders by searching for Pulaski County Extension Office or visit the website at <https://extension.purdue.edu/Pulaski>.

Please contact the Pulaski County Extension Office with questions or concerns at 574-946-3412. The extension office is located at 125 S. Riverside, Winamac, and is open from 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday-Friday.

The mission of the Purdue University Cooperative Extension Service is education of Indiana citizens through the application of land-grant university research and knowledge base to develop youth and strengthen agriculture, families and communities.
